Alaska and elsewhere. For example, graduates would be qualified for entry-level positions in government agencies such as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Geological Survey, National Ocean and Atmospheric Administration, Bureau of Ocean Energy Management, and others. A student with an M.M.S. would have an academic advantage over those with undergraduate degrees in applying for these highly competitive positions.

The specific educational outcomes for graduates in the M.M.S. are:

- Have a graduate level understanding of marine biology and oceanography concepts;

• Have the ability to analyze and synthesize published scientific information.

- Have the ability to effectively communicate with other professionals and laypersons using written, oral, and technological skills;
- Have an appreciation for and understanding of the need for lifelong learning and developing professional skills.

We requested input from potential employers of graduates from the proposed program, and received encouraging responses:

Relation of Program to other Programs within the UA System

The M.M.S. is a graduate program in the UA System.
